Demonstrators want Gorbachev to resign

MOSCOW (UPI) — Defying a Kremlin ban, at least 200,000 demonstrators rallied Thursday in downtown Moscow, shouting demands that President Mikhail Gorbachev and his government resign, but they did not challenge Soviet troops deployed to keep them from massing outside the seat of the central government.

At the same time, the legislature of the republic of Russia declared Gorbachev's three-week ban on demonstrations illegal and in protest briefly suspended a special session called by hard-line Communists to hold a no-confidence vote against Boris Yeltsin, Gorbachev's outspoken rival.

Interior Minister Boris Pugo said 50,000 militia and soldiers, carrying no firearms but equipped with riot gear, sealed off central Moscow to enforce the ban on demonstrations in the capital. The demonstrators gathered at two sites, each about a mile from the Kremlin, and did not try to get closer.

The peaceful end to a day that many feared would end in violence gave Yeltsin another symbolic victory over Gorbachev, as his supporters heeded calls for restraint and did not force a potentially bloody clash with police and troops under direct Kremlin control.

The 532-286 vote on the resolution condemning the central government's ban on demonstrations was another victory for reformers, and it demonstrated that the hard-line Communists in the Russian legislature do not have the support necessary to unseat Yeltsin as the body's chairman.

At least 200,000 demonstrators gathered less than a mile from the Kremlin in the snow at dusk along a half-mile stretch of Tverskaya Street, a main thoroughfare in Moscow, instead of trying to force their way to the rally's scheduled site at Manezh Square outside the Kremlin itself.

"You are not protecting your country!" one man in the crowd yelled at a police cordon. "You are protecting the Communist Party!"

Court sustains death penalty

SPRINGFIELD (UPI) — The Illinois Supreme Court Thursday upheld the death penalty conviction of a Southern Illinois man who killed and decapitated a homosexual because of his apparent hatred for gays.

Justices ruled the evidence was sufficient to support the jury's guilty verdict against Richard Nitz, 40, for bludgeoning, shooting and beheading Michael Mile. The court set an execution date of Sept. 11 for Nitz.

"We believe that defendant's allegations of weakness in the state's case are meritless," Justice William Clark wrote in the court's majority opinion. "The determination of credibility of witnesses and evidence is exclusively within the province of the jury and the jury will resolve any conflicts."

Justices also rejected Nitz's argument that his trial lawyer's performance was constitutionally deficient.

Nitz was convicted in September 1988 of killing Mile, 23 of Murphysboro after testimony in his trial revealed he had used the dead man's credit card and

Bloomington man acquitted by jury for 1983 slayings

BLOOMINGTON (UPI) — Bloomington businessman David Hendricks won his eight-year battle for freedom Thursday when a jury acquitted him of the bloody ax slayings of his wife and three children in 1983.

Hendricks' family members embraced, wept and pounded themselves on the back after the verdict was read in Judge Richard's Baner courtroom in the McLean County Law and Justice Center. It took Baner a few moments to quiet the jury and Hendricks had a slight smile on his face as panel members were polled.

The eight-man, four-woman jury had deliberated for more than 11 hours and listened to eight weeks of testimony before reaching a verdict. They dismissed prosecution evidence that Hendricks had confessed to the killings to a former fellow

IBHE may reaffirm FY 1992 budget requests

By Amy Cooper

The Illinois Board of Higher Education might not get what it wants, but it will get what Gov. Jim Edgar thinks it needs.

At its meeting next Tuesday, IBHE will vote on reaffirming its 1992 budget requests to Edgar, but also will vote on whether to accept Edgar's recommendations for fiscal year 1992 allocations.

Edgar recommended $1.7 billion for higher education March 6 in his proposed fiscal year 1992 budget allocations.

His proposal for SIUC was about $14 million lower than IBHE requested, said Ross Hodel, the board's deputy director.

The governor allocated SIUC $168.5 million for fiscal year 1992, although IBHE requested $181 million.

SIUC got $167.6 million in fiscal year 1991, although IBHE recommended $176.9 million, and former Gov. James R. Thompson budgeted $168.9 million.

Edgar's budget depends on funds generated by a temporary tax surcharge established in 1989. Without the surcharge, higher education funds could be cut by more than $100 million, according to a letter from the governor to IBHE chairman Arthur F. Quem.

The governor's budget does not allow for faculty salary increases, which IBHE requested.

Although the amount proposed for SIUC is about $900,000 more

State rescission adds to library's budget woes

By Jefferson Robbins
Staff Writer

State financial cuts sliced Morris Library's budget for fiscal year 1991, forcing spending cutbacks in areas such as materials, equipment and contractual services, library officials said.

Gov. Jim Edgar's January rescission of state funds has cut more than $30,000 from the Morris Library budget, said Kenneth Peterson, Dean of Library Affairs.

The rescission order asked Illinois universities to return 1 percent of funds previously allocated by the state.

University President John C. Guyon said in February SIUC would be forced to return about $1.4 million. Morris Library's share of the returned funds came to $32,762, Peterson said.

When the rescission amounts are added to the library's $74,450 November lapse target, the dollar loss is magnified, Peterson said. A lapse target is the amount of budgeted money a college or department returns to the University each fall to fund academic programs and services such as Pollution Control.

"With the lapse target which was paid last November, we have sustained a loss of $107,212 (about 1.48 percent) this year in state funding," Peterson wrote in the March issue of Southern Exposure, the library's newsmagazine.

The loss reduces the number of new books the library can purchase, the wages it can pay, and the number of student library jobs available, Peterson said.

Final Four coaches on familiar turf

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — The coaches at this year's Final Four are no stranger to this territory.

Jerry Tarkanian of Nevada-Las Vegas won an NCAA title last year. North Carolina's Dean Smith took one in 1982. Roy Williams of Kansas has seen the Final Four from another vantage point — an assistant to Smith.

Duke's Mike Krzyzewski all but gets his mail delivered to the Final Four, although this stage of the tournament hasn't treated him kindly. Still, Krzyzewski isn't offended by questions regarding his team's failure to win a title in four appearances over the past five years.

"It's no problem at all," he said.

"I'm glad I'm in a position for you to ask me that question."

No. 6 Duke, which has been in eight previous Final Fours without a title, faces No. 1 UNLV in Saturday night's semifinal at the Hoosier Dome. In the opener, No. 4 North Carolina takes on No. 12 Kansas (5:42 p.m. EST).

Duke's run of frustration in the Final Four hit a low last season, when the Blue Devils suffered the worst defeat in championship game history, 103-73 to UNLV.

Krzyzewski said his team should be better prepared now for the Runnin' Rebels, although he's not guaranteeing anything.

"If I had to make a prediction, certainly I would say Vegas would beat Duke," he said.

However, Tarkanian isn't taking Krzyzewski's educated guess too seriously.

"Just about anyone can beat us," Tarkanian said. "We have a real fine basketball team, but we're not unbeatable. We're going to have nights when we're not shooting the ball well. If the other team's guards are going to be shooting well, they can beat us. I think any team in the tournament can beat us."

Nobody has found a way to beat the Rebels since Feb. 26, 1990, when New Mexico State topped them 78-70. UNLV has won 45 straight games since, winning one national title and going 34-0 so far this season.

UNLV, in its fourth Final Four, is trying to become the first undefeated team since Indiana in 1976 and the first team to repeat as champion since UCLA in 1972 and 1973.

"They're in a position to do something not done very frequently," Krzyzewski said. "To be part of a Final Four when someone is trying to do that makes it more special."

Smith is the first coach to bring a team to the Final Four in four different decades. His initial trip was in 1967, the first of three straight years in the finals without a title. Smith also took Tar Heel teams to the finals in 1977 and 1981 before winning in 1982.

"He's been at North Carolina too long," Krzyzewski joked. "Dean has been unbelievable. For decades we've been trying to get him into early retirement. He's been absolutely fantastic."

Smith also played on a national champion team, ironically at Kansas, in 1952.

At Smith's side as an assistant for the 1982 campaign was Williams. The Jayhawks won the championship in 1988, its most recent of eight previous Final Four appearances and one year before Williams took over.

Baseball Salukis ready to defend Valley crown

Junior right handed pitcher Sean Bergman will be the starter at 1:30 p.m. today against Southwest Missouri State in the Salukis' conference opener.

By Eric Bugger
Staff Writer

If the Saluki baseball team is going to defend its 1990 Missouri Valley Conference Championship, first-year coach Sam Riggelman said success this weekend is vital.

SIUC meets MVC newcomer Southwest Missouri State (17-6) in a four-game series starting today at 1:30 p.m. The teams are scheduled for a doubleheader at noon Saturday and a single game at 1 p.m. Sunday.

"It's absolutely important," Riggelman said. "If we're going to defend our title and go out and win the thing again we're going to have to demonstrate it immediately, particularly playing at home. Our feeling is we know how important these games are and we've got to get off to a good start."

Junior catcher Derek Shelton would like to jump out to a good start in the Valley by sweeping the home series from the Bears.

"I think it's very important, because we don't know how everyone else is going to start out," Shelton said. "If we can start out on the right foot and get three or possibly four wins I think that would be an excellent start and that means everyone has to chase us."

The Salukis are in the midst of a five-game winning streak and are coming off a 7-5 win over Austin Peay Tuesday. But Southwest brings a 17-6 record (through Wednesday's action) to Carbondale and should prove to be a tough test for SIUC.

"I think we're ready for the conference season to start," Shelton said. "We played some good opponents down on the spring trip. We're the defending conference champions and we are really looking forward to defending that title."

The Bears are in their first season in the MVC, but have won more than 40 games as a member of the Mid-Continent Conference. Southwest also has received an at-large bid into the NCAA Tournament for the past several years.

"They've got a good club," Riggelman said. "They have been very good for the last four or five years and during that time they have been an at-large team in one of the regional playoffs. I think that is a very strong statement about them."

The Salukis are 10-7 overall and have come from behind in four of their last five wins.

"I think we have played well here the last five ballgames," Riggelman said. "Our kids know what is on the line. We're not trying to approach this any differently. We know what it all means, but it's just a matter of going out and executing and playing the game the way we've instructed them to."

The absence of senior third baseman Mike Kirkpatrick, who suffered a broken hand last week, could hurt the Salukis' offensive attack. Kirkpatrick leads the team with three home runs, 12 RBI, eight doubles and a .684 slugging percentage.

But senior Dale Meyer has stepped in at the hot corner and responded better than anyone expected. Against Austin Peay Meyer was two for three at the plate and made several nice defensive plays.

"Losing Mike is really going to hurt us," Shelton said. "He's swinging the bat as well as anybody. I think we're going to miss Mike, but I think Dale (Meyer) is going to step in and accept the role nicely."

A problem could arise when Riggelman decides to use Meyer on the mound. Riggelman indicated he could use junior Ed Janke or freshman Clint Smothers at third when Meyer is called upon to pitch.

SIUC has been paced by solid pitching and timely offense throughout the season.

Freshman right fielder Dan Esplin is hitting .406 to lead the Dawgs, while senior left fielder Bob Geary is hitting .400. Esplin has also ripped six doubles, two triples, two homers and driven in 10 runs.

On the hill, SIUC has once again received exceptional relief performances from senior Al Levine. Levine has a team-low 1.23 ERA, while posting a 2-1 record and saving 3 ballgames. He has worked 14.2 innings in eight where it is now.

"Last year, we were flooded out of our first meet," DeNoon said. "The next meet was at Murray State and there was an ice storm. We went to the Gateway Championship without having a meet with no rain."

The team will face Division I opponents Vanderbilt, Western Kentucky, University of Tennessee-Chattanooga, University of Alabama-Birmingham and Austin Peay, along with several other smaller schools. DeNoon is confident going into the meet.

"We'll be competing in 17 events and I think we should win eight to 10 of them," DeNoon said. "We're really strong in all of the events."

Highlights of the meet will come from freshman Jennifer Bozue and sophomore Cheryl Evers in the throwing events. Bozue was named the Most Valuable Player in the throwing events three weeks ago in New Orleans and at the last meet Evers won the shotput.

Other Salukis to watch will be sophomores Lecann Conway and Dawn Barefoot and junior Amie Padgett in the long distance events.

Sophomore Nacolia Moore and junior Michelle Williams will have long days at the track. Both will compete in the 100-meter, long jump, triple jump and the 4x100 relay. DeNoon said it is hard on the athletes.

"They have 16 or 17 competitive attempts, plus all the warming up and warming down," DeNoon said. "When the day is over, they think they are the distance runners."

Mayor upset with reports of officials scalping tickets

INDIANAPOLIS (UPI) — Mayor William Hudnut said Thursday it is "unethical" and "reprehensible" to scalp NCAA Final Four basketball tickets obtained by public officials because of the positions they hold.

The tickets, worth $60 each, are heavily in demand. A limited number was made available for sale to top elected officials, including the mayor, governor, some members of the legislature and all 29 members of the City-County Council.

At least two council members reportedly were considering the re-sale of their tickets at greatly inflated prices.

"To me, it's highly unethical and inappropriate," Hudnut said. "I bought my tickets and was pleased to do so and I wouldn't dream of trying to scalp them."

"To use your public position for personal profit is reprehensible," he said. Council members Julius Shaw and David Brooks, both Republicans, said they were considering scalping their tickets.

Shaw mentioned a price of $1,500 for his two tickets but said he found no takers.

U.N. official compares fires in Kuwait to nuclear disaster

KUWAIT CITY (UPI) — A senior U.N. official Thursday likened the uncertain health and environmental consequences of hundreds of oil well fires in Kuwait to the Soviet Union's 1986 Chernobyl nuclear disaster. Michael Gwynne said just as experts initially did not know what to expect from the radiation that escaped from the damaged Soviet power plant, it is still unclear what harm all the burning oil and fumes will cause. "The problem is we simply do not know," Gwynne, director of the U. N.'s Global Environmental Monitoring System, said.

U.S. advisers to train soldiers for drug war

LA PAZ, Bolivia (UPI) — Fifty-six American military advisers are due to arrive in Bolivia within four weeks to launch a training program for army troops to be deployed in the drug war, U.S. diplomatic sources said Thursday. A total of 112 U.S. advisers are expected to arrive in Bolivia to train 2,000 Bolivian troops in two different 10-week training periods, according to Bolivian and American officials. The training program, aided by $33.2 million in U.S. aid, culminates 10 months of negotiations.

Trial date set for videotaped police beating

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Three police officers and a sergeant accused of beating a motorist in an incident captured on videotape were ordered Thursday to stand trial on May 13. Superior Court Judge Bernard J. Kamins, over the protests of defense attorneys who argued that they needed more time to prepare their cases, set the trial date for Sgt. Stacey Koon, 40, and officers Laurence Powell, 28, Timothy Wind, 30, and Ted Briseno, 38. The four were indicted by the county grand jury for assault.

Research: Detectors overestimate radon gas

PHOENIX (UPI) — Radon detectors placed in basements appear to overestimate the amount of the gas to which people are actually exposed, a researcher reported Thursday. Naomi Harley of the New York University School of Medicine tested 52 homes in DuPage County, Ill., where state officials had previously surveyed radon levels. The levels measured in the basement tended to be much higher than those measured on the detectors worn by individuals, Harley reported at a cancer seminar.

Unemployment decreases in most major Illinois cities

CHICAGO (UPI) — The jobless rate in 12 of the 13 major metropolitan areas in Illinois dropped in February, mirroring the statewide trend, state officials said Thursday. Rockford was the only exception, showing a 1 percent increase due to automobile layoffs to reduce inventory. The Illinois Department of Unemployment Security said the workers have since been recalled. IDES cited strong gains in education — with colleges resuming classes — and three service areas — education, tax preparation and temporary business help.

Tornado-torn town declared disaster area

By United Press International

Gov. Jim Edgar Thursday declared Lemont a state disaster area in the wake of violent weather that ripped the northeastern section of Illinois, saying it was a miracle no one was killed in areas that looked like they had been bombed. Cleanup operations began in earnest to remove rubble. Lemont was worst victim of at least eight tornadoes that skipped across the state, where more than 100 homes were damaged.

Three vying for city council position

Morris striving to attract jobs, businesses to city

By Leslie Colp
Staff Writer

Richard Morris says he has a lot of time and energy invested in Carbondale, and being a member of the City Council helps him get a good return on that investment.

"I like making decisions," said the councilman who is running for his second term. "(They) are not hard for me to make."

But Morris said the City Council's decisions are not made lightly. They are made for everyone, including students.

"You're always in the middle," he said. "But I'm very objective."

Morris said he wants to continue bringing more jobs and businesses to Carbondale. One business he supports is an off-track betting parlor.

Officials from Fairmount Park racetrack have not said how many jobs the parlor would bring to Carbondale. A business such as the parlor would bring additional revenue to the city including a food and beverage tax and a hotel/motel tax.

Morris said he likes the progress Carbondale is making on such projects as the University Mall expansion and downtown development. Downtown development includes restoring the Town Square, which is bordered by Jackson Street, Monroe Street and Illinois Avenue.

"We are just scratching the surface of progress in Carbondale," he said, not citing any specific projects.

Relations with the University also are important, Morris said. SIUC and the city should continue to work together to maintain good relations. He said students can become members on city committees.

"(Students) need to be just as aware of what is going on in Carbondale as the residents," he said.

Morris is the office manager of the Illinois Department of Employment Security in Carbondale and Murphysboro. He and his wife, Susan, live on Skyline Drive.

Englert hoping to gain seat with student vote

By Leslie Colp
Staff Writer

Kyle Englert says he is running for Carbondale City Council because he does not like the way the current council is run.

"I think I could do a better job," said the 1986 SIUC political science graduate.

Englert, 26, said the council should try harder to promote Carbondale businesses and bring new ones into the city.

"Carbondale City Council has got to get on the ball," he said. "They're just sitting on their duffs."

Englert also does not agree with the elimination of the city's support for the annual Halloween street party.

"They can still have a party—but a harmless one," he said.

Englert said he would have voted in favor of locating an off-track betting parlor in Carbondale if he had been on the council. It will bring much-needed jobs and money to Carbondale and will be a good tourist attraction, he said.

An off-track betting parlor run by Fairmount would be an asset to Carbondale, he said.

Officials from Fairmount Park have not said how many jobs the parlor will bring to the city but they are offering a proposal that would bring the city $75,000 a year for five years.

Englert said he thinks he can beat one of the incumbents, but SIUC students will make the difference.

"If I can get the students to come out and vote, I think I'll have a chance," he said. Englert said he is talking to students to try to get them to vote.

University student turnout typically has been low. At the last city election in 1989, 13 votes were cast from Precinct 23, which includes Brush Towers and University Park, and 28 votes were cast in Precinct 25, the Thompson Point area, according to Jackson County election statistics.

Englert, a handyman, lives with his parents at 500 Skyline Drive. His father, Duwayne, is a zoology professor at SIUC.

Mills wanting to remain involved with city projects

By Leslie Colp
Staff writer

John Mills has represented Carbondale's city government in some capacity for more than 10 years, but says he is not a politician.

Politician or not, Mills is running for his second term as councilman.

Mills said he is an average Carbondale citizen who can represent most of the city, including SIUC students.

"I still relate," said the 1975 SIUC radio and television graduate.

But Mills said he is worried students will not vote because most do not have an interest in city government.

Some may have a negative impression of the council because of the elimination of city support for the annual Halloween street party, he said.

"Halloween was a no-win situation," he said. "It used to be a community event, but in the end it wasn't fun."

Mills was a member of the Liquor Advisory Board for 10 years prior to being elected to City Council in 1987.

He said he likes being on the City Council because he enjoys being involved in the city's progress in projects such as the University Mall expansion and downtown development.

One thing he does not like about being on the city council is too many people asking for money.

"People think the city is a never-ending well of money," he said. "And you just can't make everybody happy."

Mills voted in favor of locating an off-track betting parlor in Carbondale. It will bring jobs and additional revenue the city needs, he said.

Officials from Fairmount Park race track in Collinsville have not said how many jobs the parlor will bring to Carbondale, but they are offering a proposal that would bring the city $75,000 a year for five years.

Mills is a caseworker for the Department of Public Aid and owns rental property. He is not married.

Molded heels cups cradle your heels and absorb shock.

Birkenstock footbeds energize your feet by absorbing shock, cushioning and supporting the arches, and allowing your feet to move naturally. And unlike other shoes, the perimeter from toe to heel is straight, following the natural shape of your foot.

L.A. beating sparks justified horror, shock

WHEN A GROUP OF L.A. POLICE officers severely beat a motorist on the highway two weeks ago, they hadn't planned on being the subject of a home video that is being viewed as a horror film.

Officers pulled over 25-year-old Rodney King for speeding and decided force was needed to make sure King understood he had violated the law.

King is black and has a criminal record. And L.A. Police Chief Daryl Gates said that while he regretted the incidence, he hoped it would "be the vehicle to move him down the road to a good life."

Right now, the road King must travel involves recovering from facial nerve and brain damage suffered in the attack.

THE GUILT OR INNOCENCE of the officers involved will be decided in a court of law. But the adequacy and quality of police training in L.A. and perhaps the entire United States needs to be examined.

Police officers put themselves at maximum risk every day for relatively low pay. The American people rely on the police for everything from getting keys out of a locked car to answering domestic violence calls to breaking up drug rings.

Many wonder if officers can really be trained for every situation they will find themselves in. The answer is obviously no. It is not realistic to think an officer will be 100 percent prepared for every crisis.

What is reasonable, however, is to expect close supervision and frequent evaluations of officers to make sure the established rules and guidelines are being strictly practiced on even the roughest streets.

MOST VIEWERS WATCHING the famous L.A. police beating of King wouldn't question that the force used was excessive and abusive.

What can be questioned, however, is whether or not police administrators and officials are keeping a close enough watch on what is going on in their profession.

But problems in the law enforcement system hardly excuse the officers in Los Angeles for knocking the fillings out of the mouth of someone who was pulled over for speeding.

It's easy to blame the system and let the mistakes of individuals involved slip by.

Bomb threats simply 'idiotic'

These comments are directed to the so-called "mad bomber" idiot who planted the so-called "bomb at Wham." This little stunt you pulled is one of the most idiotic things I have ever seen.

It apparently is not the only so-called empty bomb threat that has ever occurred here, as reported by someone who's been through this before.

Well, bomber, what's your motive? Your hatred of school? Possibly. To delay a test? Likely. Fraternity stunt? Maybe, because that's why they exist. To play a prank and waste peoples' time? Obviously.

If you must pull these pranks designed by preschoolers for preschoolers, I suggest you get your sorry butt off this campus and never come back. The last time I saw a bomb threat, the two straight-F, class-skipping, detention-living scums got expelled, busted and jailed. They rotted.—Steve Lucas, freshman, computer information processing.

Animal experiments needed for research

Animal rights advocates have become increasingly more vocal about their views on biomedical research.

However, the loudness of their cries overshadows the accuracy of their information.

Some have expressed concerns that dogs and monkeys are being maimed and tortured in the name of science at this university. In fact, neither dogs nor primates have been used for research here for years.

Animal rights activists have selectively targeted the use of animals in biomedical research (as opposed to their use for product testing, furs or slaughter for food) for their sometimes violent and destructive campaigns.

While 63 percent of all pages written expressing concern for animal well-being are directed toward research and teaching, only 0.3 percent of all animals are used annually for this purpose.

The researchers on this campus adhere to strict regulations regarding the humane treatment of animals, as set down by the Department of Agriculture.

These regulations are a matter of public record and have recently been published in the Federal Register.

Computer modeling, as well as cell cultures, are already being employed on this campus for teaching and research.

However, some of these techniques are still in their infancy. Computers, for example, can only model a well characterized system.

It is impossible to accurately simulate a system without first knowing how it works.

Until something better comes along, animal research is a useful, necessary endeavor.

Animal rights activists will continue to drive their point with dramatics, vandalism and misinformation.

Scientists, however, can only justify their work by showing the level of health care we enjoy today and the advances in our knowledge of such diseases as epilepsy, Parkinson disease, and diabetes.

None of these would be possible if it were not for animal research.—Brian A. Adrian, Michael A. Stalnack, Scott A. Summers, graduates, physiology.

"If they don't say anything, what in the world do they expect to get anything done?"—Councilman John Mills in reference to student apathy towards city government.

Affirmative action groups hypocritical

Clap. Clap. Clap. I want to congratulate Johnetta Haley for her wonderful, politically correct letter.

Who could possibly disagree with her?

Who doesn't support an end to racism?

Who doesn't believe everyone should have an equal chance at an education? Who doesn't want to live in racial utopia?

Ms. Haley, along with most members and the leadership of affirmative action groups are hypocrites. They are blatant bigots.

Their version of equal rights means quotas and special incentive programs.

Why is it a black doctor's child who attended a private high school is deprived, while a white coal miner's child who attended an unconstitutional school system in Kentucky is privileged?

Why aren't Asians and American Indian considered minorities for scholarship eligibility at SIUC?

Why doesn't affirmative action promote incentives for the economically deprived, regardless of race?

Why? Because racism against whites, Asian and American Indians is institutionally acceptable; it is politically correct.

No doubt, there will be rebuttals to this letter, some saying affirmative action works for everybody.

When is the last time affirmative action forced an employer to hire a qualified white male? Some will say minorities deserve a break because of their history in the United States.

I for one am damn tired of paying for the mistakes of the past 150 years.

I am tired of watching less-qualified people get promotions over more qualified people (yes, it happened to me) because of their skin tone.

I am not a racist; however, I am politically incorrect and proud of it. Where I am from, "equal" means to have neither advantage nor disadvantage.

As long as affirmative action groups discriminate against me, I will fight against them.—Derek Simmons, senior, computer science.

Students not stifled by disabilities

Disabled student shares thoughts on independence

By Rennie Walker
Staff Writer

Walking alongside JoAnn Milas, senior in therapeutic recreation, it is hard to hear her talk over the loud traffic on the Strip, but it is easy to hear the soft, steady whirr of her electric wheelchair.

"Being independent doesn't mean you have to do everything on your own," Milas said. "It means being self-sufficient, knowing what you need and getting it."

On the way to lunch she is a social butterfly, giving a friendly "how you doing" to many people she has come to know over the past two years at SIUC. A few are disabled, but most are able-bodied.

"This is all I've ever known," Milas said, waiting to order at the ZIPPS walk-up window. Milas, 27, has cerebral palsy.

She hopes to someday work with kids who are disabled from an injury and help them become as independent as possible.

"I was born this way. Now people who were once able-bodied, they have the tougher job," she said.

"They've gone through a drastic change and it's more difficult for them, more so than for me. They really have to learn how to readjust. I've readjusted too, but I've been doing it all my life."

Milas shows more patience and endurance than many students. Getting pop out of a machine appears to be a struggle, but one cannot see frustration in her face as she bends over in her chair, reaching down, fumbling for the can.

"Once a person can do something—if it's not accessible, it's not possible—but when there are no barriers, it is up to you to do it," she said.

Once curbs have been cut and buildings made accessible, with bathrooms, whether or not a disabled person ventures out of the house is up to him or her. She said it is like equal opportunity employment.

"People owe you the opportunity," she said. "Whether or not you screw up on the job—that's your. But I believe everyone deserves the opportunity to make it work or not."

"Accessibility and discrimination go hand in hand. There's blatant discrimination and there are levels where it is silent. It can come down to the little things that are just not thought about."

Office for disabled provides support

By Rennie Walker
Staff Writer

The office of Disabled Student Services is not a necessity for students to succeed on campus, said the assistant coordinators.

"Accommodations have to be made somewhere, and it doesn't matter where," said Ellen Bradley, assistant coordinator of DSS.

Without the office, professors would have to spend more time catering to the needs of disabled students in their classes, Bradley said.

"DSS is here for the convenience of the professor and the student," she said.

Disabled students are those with learning disabilities and those with hearing, visual or mobility impairments. More than 300 students seek assistance from DSS, which offers tours of the campus before the student starts school and test proctoring, among other services.

"What we offer depends on what people request," said Lois Naegle, assistant coordinator, noting that test proctoring is the most sought after service. In test proctoring, a DSS employee obtains a copy of the test from the professor and administers it to the student, catering to meet needs such as reading questions if the student has a visual impairment.

For disabled students who use wheelchairs, the accommodation could be as simple as providing a level writing surface.

Choosing the scenic route, JoAnn Milas, senior in therapeutic recreation from Berwyn, cuts through Thompson Woods on the way to her Tuesday afternoon class.

It can come down to a little thing like a folding plastic bathroom door that is transparent in her dorm room at Smith Hall, Thompson Point.

Milas said the bathroom door is embarrassing, especially when she has friends over. She said a bathroom door is a basic need, and when it is not satisfied, it becomes a question of dignity.

"I'm not bitter, but I am frustrated about the little things that are human—the things that everyone deserves no matter their color or whether they're tall or short," Milas said.

"Sometimes they don't put stoplights at an intersection until there is a traffic accident.

I'm not sure what it will take to get a legitimate bathroom door."

She said some disabled students might disagree when she says that there are no drastic differences between able-bodied and disabled students.

"Once the basic needs are met so I am able to get around like you can and be comfortable with who I am, the differences are only cultural."

"There are men and women, there are black and white people. But we all have the same emotions and feelings. All of us can gain an understanding of each other and communicate on a basic level."

If disabled students want services able-bodied students receive, they go to the correct place to get them. They do not automatically go to DSS, which considers itself to be a support system and a link between students and professors.

"Students choose whether or not to use this office," Bradley said. "Just because you have a disability does not mean you come here."

The office functions under a mainstream philosophy, meaning that disabled students and able-bodied students solve the same problems when it comes to obtaining a degree.

"When you go out and get a job, you aren't isolated,"

Program gives all students chance to play

By Rennie Walker
Staff Writer

Whatever the game, the Disabled Student Recreation programs wants to give disabled students the opportunity to play.

"We have a lot of individuals who are into different things," said Jeff Shuck, in charge of DSR, a division of Special Populations at the Recreation Center. Shuck is a graduate student in administrative justice.

Shuck said that over the years DSR has made such adventures as skiing, mountain climbing and skydiving accessible for disabled students.

One role of DSR is coordinating the competitive sports program. Todd Hatfield, graduate student in higher education, coaches the wheelchair basketball team and works with tennis players.

The basketball team competes in the Central Inter-Collegiate wheelchair basketball conference against colleges such as the University of Illinois-Champaign and the University of Wisconsin-Whitewater.

DSR also sponsors individualized fitness programs and bowling Thursday nights at the Student Center.

For bowling nights, DSR provides equipment such as sliding rails for visually disabled students and ramps for those who use wheelchairs. It also provides special bowling balls for students who need them, ones with handles that retract when the ball is let go and also balls without holes.

DSR sponsors events on a monthly basis such as trips to St. Louis, a play or symphony and sporting events.

"We just get together and do something away from Carbondale," Shuck said. "Some people might not have a way to get out of town, and it's important to get out once in a while."

The turnout of able-bodied students attending DSR functions is low, just like the disabled student turnout at Student Programming Commission events is low, Shuck said.

There is a belief that DSR events are only for disabled students, but Shuck said that is not the case. DSR wants all interested students to participate in the events.

"We don't want to segregate," Shuck said. "That's not our goal. In fact, it's counter to our goal, which is to show disabled students are the same as other students."

RSO sets mission to battle barriers

By Rennie Walker
Staff Writer

The room was way too quiet for Mark Roemeling, graduate student in higher education, when he held the first meeting of a new registered student organization for disabled students Wednesday afternoon.

Only four students, two disabled and two able-bodied, showed up to pick up a copy of the constitution for Other Able Southern Illinois Students.

"I would like to think the problem is that I just didn't get the word out in time or in a large enough volume," Roemeling said.

"I really hope it isn't just because disabled students don't care and don't want to make a difference in their futures."

This is the first RSO for a unified disabled student group, said Ellen Bradley, assistant coordinator at Disabled Student Services. She said the group is independent of DSS, but the office supports it.

Roemeling formed the group to create a unified voice for all disabled students. This will provide a focus to get things done, he said. The mission is to fight physical and psychological barriers of disabled students, he said.

"We may present ourselves differently and get around in ways foreign to others, but we are as able as anyone," Roemeling said.

Bradley said. "You're not in a special area. You go to work, eat and function with everyone else. Why should college be any different?"

Naegle said DSS is fighting a different battle than accessibility on campus.

"Physical access is easy to define and usually easy to solve," she said.

"Other problems fall into a different realm, such as a disabled student signing up for a major and being expected to fail. They are sometimes not judged on performance-based criteria, but by a suspicion they will just not be able to succeed."

Sometimes professors offer to make classes less challenging for disabled students in order to make it easier for them, Naegle said.

"Disabled students don't want reduced requirements or watered down classes," Naegle said. "These professors mean well—they don't want to see failure—but they are really being condescending."

Unless the turnout at the next meeting is larger, Roemeling's vision will not become reality.

"I'm not giving up," he said. "I'll give it one more shot, twist some arms to get people to come and get the word out."

OASIS has a potential to make an impact on campus, Bradley said. "Any unified voice is stronger than a single one," she said. "A letter with 25 signatures instead of just one is much more meaningful and will receive more attention."

Although other groups for disabled students have been formed, Bradley said RSOs receive more attention.

The huge crowd roared chants of "Gorbachev, resign!" "Down with the Communist Party!" and "Yeltsin! Yeltsin!" Russian nationalist flags and dozens of banners bobbed above the crowd, with slogans such as "Hands off Yeltsin" and "Defend the Homeland."

A smaller group of about 20,000 people gathered at the historic Arbat Square about the same distance from the Kremlin, but neither rally clashed with the riot troops blockading the center of Soviet power.

The organizers of the banned rally, summoned to the Kremlin on the eve of the protest, had refused a last-minute demand by the KGB chief and the interior minister to cancel the demonstration, but urged their followers not to succumb to government provocation.

Despite the Kremlin-controlled forces arrayed against them — with water cannons, horse brigades and 10-deep rows of club-wielding riot troops — many of the demonstrators said they were no longer afraid of Soviet power.

"Nothing can be more frightening than 73 years of communism," said Moscow City Council member Arnold Litvinov. "It's time for us to rise up so we can live like human beings."

The demonstration was called to support Yeltsin during the special session of the Russian republic's Congress of People's Deputies called by Gorbachev supporters for the no-confidence vote against the opposition figure, who serves as the chairman of the republic's standing parliament, the Supreme Soviet.

There was no sign of the no-confidence motion Thursday, and instead radical lawmakers who support Yeltsin's demands for rapid economic and political reforms voted to suspend the emergency session for a day in protest of the massive troop presence to quash dissent.

Congress Vice Chairman Ruslan Khasbulatov met with Gorbachev to inform him of the resolution condemning the central government for the ban on demonstrations in the capital and asked him to pull troops off the streets and allow the demonstration.

He reported back to the legislature that the Soviet leader "showed he is not inclined to compromise on this issue."

Yeltsin opened the special session of the congress and immediately gave the floor to a deputy who proposed a resolution condemning the central government's ban on rallies as unconstitutional and a violation of the republic's sovereignty.

prison inmate and that he faked a robbery at the house and a business trip later to cover up the slayings.

The verdict was even more surprising because Hendricks was convicted of the killings in 1984 and made a second appeal to the state Supreme Court, which granted him a rare retrial.

Hendricks' case has gained attention around the state because of the brutal nature of the crime and the fact that his parents and in-laws both believed he was innocent from the start. A book written about the case, "Reasonable Doubt," also raised questions about Hendricks' involvement and helped lead to the Illinois Supreme Court overturning his conviction.

As Hendricks left the courtroom, he was surrounded by a sea of reporters and weeping family members. The crowd cheered when Hendricks embraced his wife Pat, who was able to have contact with him out-of-jail for the first time since they were married in a prison ceremony.

The crowd cheered when Hendricks embraced his wife Pat. He wept as he knelt in a circle of relatives and embraced his two young stepchildren. He refused to speak to reporters because he said he wanted to spend the time with his family and did not want to incriminate himself with any comments.

"Come on guys, don't ruin this," Nadine Palmer, the mother of Hendricks' slain former wife Susan, said she never once lost faith in her son-in-law and she said

Hendricks' alleged prison confession to the killings was "superfluous nothing."

Assistant special prosecutor Ed Parkinson said he was "stunned." "I can't understand the verdict," Parkinson said, adding that he wanted to hear what the jury had to say about the case.

One incident almost threatened to interrupt jury deliberations during the trial. On Wednesday, reporter L.P. Phillips of Peoria's WMBD-TV tried to get a look at the floor of the motel where the jury was deliberating and sleeping but he was escorted out by a sheriff's deputy, said McLean County Sheriff Steve Brien. Phillips could have caused a mistrial for jury tampering, the sheriff said.

than last year, the budget only allows $88,000 for two of 14 new programs SIUC requested money for, said Student Trustee William Hall.

IBHE also will vote whether to encourage Edgar and the General Assembly to make the income tax surcharge permanent.

Hall said he was asked by the Student Advisory Committee, a group of student government leaders from universities, colleges and private schools throughout Illinois, to vote against IBHE's initial budget requests.

SAC approved of its request for a 7-percent increase in faculty and staff salaries and a 10-percent increase in library funds, but it disapproved of a 5-percent tuition increase, said Susan Hall, SAC Budget Subcommittee chairwoman.

The governor's budget allows for the increase in library funds, but the salary increase was not funded, she said.

SAC will meet Saturday to determine if they want IBHE to approve the governor's budget proposal.

"We won't be voting against the governor's budget, but we will be voting whether to disapprove of certain aspects of it," Susan Hall said.

About 190 Illinois university and college presidents were invited to discuss the budget, undergraduate education issues and the extension of the surcharge at an April 1 meeting, Hodel said. The official agenda meeting will be April 2 at Illinois State University in Normal. Edgar will be at the meeting.

After Tuesday, the proposed budget will be given to the General Assembly for debate until its July 1 deadline, Hodel said.

had told a friend he committed the slaying. Rita Nitz was also sentenced to life in prison for assisting in the killing.

Testimony at his trial indicated Nitz hit Miley in the head 10 to 20 times with a baseball bat. Nitz and his wife Rita then stuck Miley in the trunk of his own car and drove him to a wooded area. There, Nitz shot him, took his head off and set the car afire.

During the proceedings, Nitz tried to blame a 17-year-old neighbor for the slaying but a jury rejected his effort.

Before the killing, Nitz was man who constantly berated homosexual men from the Carbondale area and used derogatory terms to describe them, including "faggot."

Nitz is currently on death row at the Menard Correctional Center in Southern Illinois.

In another ruling Thursday, justices set a Sept. 18 execution date for Edward Spreitzer. Spritzer was one of several men involved in the kidnapping and killing of Linda Sutton in DuPage County in 1981. Sutton's mutilated and partially decomposed body was found seven days after she was last seen alive.

The U.S. Supreme Court had denied a review of Spreitzer's appeal and Illinois high court justices also rejected Spreitzer's claim that his lawyer did not do an adequate job investigating, locating and presenting the testimony of defense witnesses in the case.

But the loss was not severe enough to leave current library personnel unemployed, he said.

"We made no layoffs," he said. "All the cuts in that area came from unfilled salary positions."

The $32,762 loss includes a cut in the library's materials budget of about $7,000, which will limit the number of new books purchased, he said.

Although the library was forced to drop a number of expensive periodical subscriptions because of a lack of increased state funds earlier this semester, Peterson said the rescission cuts would not affect subscriptions immediately.

But if state funds for fiscal year 1992 remain at current levels, more subscriptions may be cancelled, he said.

The total breakdown of library cuts:

- $18,243 from wages and unfilled job positions;
- $3,864 from travel expenses;
- $7,377 from library materials;
- $1,333 from equipment;
- $1,200 from contractual services;
- $384 from telecommunications;
- $261 from commodities.

Saddam preparing to attack Iraqi rebel positions — officials

By United Press International

Saddam Hussein appeared to be massing his heaviest artillery Thursday in a major effort to take back or put under his complete control those areas of Iraq where the heaviest insurgent fighting has occurred, U.S. officials and rebel sources said.

The five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council have reached general agreement on a cease-fire resolution formally ending the Persian Gulf war, but it was likely to take until next week for the full 15-member panel to vote on the plan.

The Pentagon said the number of U.S. troops in the gulf area had fallen below 400,000 and it also issued the first official count of the number of Iraqi soldiers buried by American troops.

And in an effort to put aside a flap between military and civilian authority, President Bush expressed his personal support to Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf despite comments by the commander of Operation Desert Storm that he might have disagreed with his boss's decision to end the war.

Both State Department and Pentagon officials reported that Saddam's troop appear to be on the move against Kurdish rebels who hold areas of northern Iraq and Shiite Muslim and others who have been fighting in the south.

"In the north this morning the government began a major assault against the city of Kirkuk," State Department spokesman Richard Boucher said. "Government forces were employing tanks, heavy artillery, helicopter gunships, and probably multiple rocket launchers.

"Buildings and other facilities inside Kirkuk had already suffered significant damage during the first hours of the assault."

Assistant Pentagon spokesman Bob Hall said that so far U.S. forces have buried the remains of 444 Iraqi soldiers at 55 sites, and information on those burials has been given to the International Committee of the Red Cross.

Schwarzkopf said in television interview that he personally recommended that allied forces continue pursuing fleeing Iraqi army units even after Kuwait had been liberated. This brought a curt rebuff from Pentagon Wednesday saying the general had agreed with his superiors about ending the hostilities.

Officials investigate cause of crash between Amtrak train, semi-trailer

CHICAGO (UPI) — Will County and Amtrak officials Thursday were investigating the cause of a truck-train accident that injured 10 people in Will County.

Service was expected to be restored by midday on the Illinois Central line near Peotone, Amtrak spokesman Debbie Hare said.

She said the northbound City of New Orleans was re-routed Thursday between Mattoon and Chicago on a combination of the Union Pacific and Grand Trunk lines.

The southbound Illini collided with a semi-trailer truck loaded with steel Wednesday evening. A Will County sheriff's police spokesman said all five passenger cars and the locomotive left the tracks but remained upright.

Ten passengers were treated for minor injuries at Olympia Fields Osteopathic Medical Center and released, nursing supervisor Joan Moore said.

About 141 passengers were aboard the Illini, bound from Chicago to Carbondale.

The truck driver, Edwin Gallfried, 41, Chicago, was leaving the Federal Pipe Co. when the accident occurred, Peotone Fire Chief Cliff Oliver said.

Gallfried was treated for minor injuries.

Police had not determined why the truck was on the crossing, but had not filed any charges against Gallfried.

"Tires flew right by the window, steel was everywhere," passenger Michael Vitale of Chicago said. "Everybody could smell gas."

Another passenger, Michael Gust of Homewood, said the train continued to move for about 200 yards after the impact.

Amtrak official William O'Dea said the locomotive sustained $75,000 worth of damage. The fuel tank was split open, spilling 1,300 gallons of fuel onto the tracks.

Passengers who were not injured spent two hours in the Peotone Fire station awaiting chartered buses to take them to their destinations, Hare said.

Amtrak and Illinois Central officials are investigating the incident, but Hare said the crew will not be tested for drugs.

GPSC supports parking sticker change

By Doug Toole
Staff Writer

The Graduate and Professional Student Council supported resolutions to change some storage parking spaces on campus to red sticker parking and to allow graduate assistants who teach to purchase blue parking stickers.

Richard Fasano, Health Service representative, said the resolution eliminates a strip of 74 green storage parking spaces in Lot 59 behind the Student Health Service and designates the entire lot as non-overnight parking for students, faculty and staff.

The resolution also designates 100 green parking spaces in the extension lot behind Lot 59, after the lights in the extension lot become operational.

Fasano said he will take the recommendation to the Parking

Board for consideration.

Fasano said the resolution benefits those using the Health Service and graduate law students who want to park close to the Lesar Law Building.

However, the resolution will lengthen the walk for undergraduate students to reach the storage extension lot.

"If accepted, this will have a negative effect on undergraduates," Fasano said.

The second parking resolution, which also will be sent to the Parking Board, allows graduate students who teach to purchase blue parking stickers.

The resolution would allow them to park closer to their classes without competing with other students for parking spaces.

Ron Smith, vice president for graduate student affairs, who said he favored the resolution, said graduate students who teach should have the same parking privileges as professors, who can purchase blue parking stickers.

Because blue stickers cost $30 and red stickers cost $10, Smith said not all graduate students will buy blue stickers.

Ray Flavin, SIUC School of Law representative, said he voted against the second resolution because the right of a graduate student who teaches should not outweigh the right of any other student to park on campus.

"Any expansion of blue (parking spaces) into red (parking spaces) is bad," Flavin said.

In other business, GPSC supported tabling a registered student organization study committee until after summer, extending hours and adding staff to the Bursar's Office during the two weeks before and after the beginning of a semester, and creating an internal budget committee.

Susan Hall, vice president of administrative affairs, was nominated for GPSC presidency. Flavin was nominated for vice president of administrative affairs and Smith was nominated to retain his current office.

GPSC President Charles Ramsey said although the three will be the only candidates on the ballot, write-ins will be allowed in the April 24 election.

Also at the meeting, James McKinley was presented with the 1991 Outstanding Contribution to Graduate and Professional Education Award.

McKinley, a counselor with the MEDPREP program, said he was honored to win the award.

U.S. Embassy in Soviet Union erupts in flames

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A massive fire erupted in an elevator shaft at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow Thursday morning, engulfing the roof in flames and forcing hundreds of employees to evacuate the building, the State Department said.

Three people were injured in the fire that began at 10:15 a.m. local time in the old compound that U.S. officials have been trying to close for years.

A new U.S. embassy was completed by Soviet workers years ago that has been mired in controversy, as it was found to contain bugging devices.

Congress, angered over the Reagan administration's failure to discover the problem earlier, has refused to pay for a new building or repair the existing structure.

State Department officials had no immediate explanation for the cause of the massive fire, although they ruled out arson or foul play.

Local Soviet firefighters rushed to the scene and put out the fire that caused the entire central roof structure to collapse.

Prof: Savings programs better option for poor

By Gregory Norfleet
Staff Writer

Saving money is the way out of poverty, a social problems researcher said Thursday at SIUC.

Michael Sherraden, associate professor in the George Warren Brown School of Social Work at Washington University in St. Louis, proposed giving savings bonds instead of welfare payments to poor Americans as a matter of government policy.

Sherraden, author of "Assets and the Poor: A New American Welfare Policy," said welfare only sustains the poor.

"The welfare policy supports the weak, but it doesn't help make them strong," he said.

He proposed individual development accounts, which are designed to give poor people incentives and opportunities enjoyed by middle- and upper-income citizens. Under the program, savings would be matched by government contributions.

Sherraden said people actually would have more faith in the future if they could see what they were getting.

"It would be hope in a concrete form," he said. "An account set up for college makes hope a reality."

He said the program would be optional and those who opt for it would take classes to learn how to save money.

He said there is a possibility a few people might be so encouraged to save that they might not spend on necessities. But, it is worth the risk.

Under the welfare system, the government penalizes people for saving money, Sherraden said. He gave an example of a woman who saved $3,000 for her child to go to college. She was hauled into court, found guilty and fined $1,500. By law, the judge had to hand down the verdict, but he questioned if it was a crime to save money.

Hope for success in Soviet Union for Gorbachev dims with turmoil

WASHINGTON (UPI) — As evidenced Thursday by the latest sign of a Soviet Union in turmoil, the administration is finding it increasingly difficult to keep Western hopes pinned to the success or even survival of Mikhail Gorbachev.

Publicly, U.S. officials continue to place faith in Gorbachev's ability to weather a crossfire of criticism that has brought his ambitious domestic reforms to a virtual halt.

In private, however, they wonder whether the Soviet Union's march toward economic collapse and political disintegration will prove too daunting a challenge for a man who has enjoyed fame on the world stage only to suffer failure at home.

The mass protest Thursday in Moscow, which brought at least 200,000 demonstrators into the streets in defiance of a ban on political rallies, brought a reminder from Washington that the Soviet government remains obligated to basic human rights under international law, including the Helsinki Final Act of 1975.

Noting that past demonstrations "occurred without incident," White House spokesman Roman Popadiuk urged the Kremlin to "remove all unnecessary restrictions on rights of expression and assembly as soon as possible."

That message, couched in something short of a warning, was conveyed to Soviet authorities on the eve of the protests by U.S. Ambassador Jack Matlock, Popadiuk said.

"We strongly urged the Soviet government to refrain from using force against peaceful demonstrators," he told reporters. "We also reminded the Soviet government of its commitments through the Helsinki process to respect the right to peaceful assembly and demonstration."

Despite tension over the Kremlin's crackdown on independence moves by the Baltic republics, its attempts to stifle dissent, Popadiuk asserted the state of U.S.-Soviet relations "continues to be good."

New play by student to open, offer look at wedding plans

By Tracy Sargeant
Entertainment Editor

A student's new play offers a unique and personal look at weddings, traditions, decisions and the simple fact that collecting useless dresses is a common problem among bridesmaids.

Amy Burt, doctoral student in performance studies, wrote and will star in "Always a Bridesmaid" at 8 tonight in the Marion Kleinau Theatre.

The play is a humorous one-person show that looks at plans leading up to and after a wedding. "Always a Bridesmaid" combines elements of public speaking, stand-up comedy and personal narrative.

Burt said she was inspired to write the play because she has been a bridesmaid in many weddings, the last one in June.

"I've been in lots of weddings. (I wrote this because) I was pissed off that I had buy so many bridesmaid dresses," she joked.

Burt said that because the script is part stand-up it changes each night depending on the audience.

The stage area and the lobby of the theater are decorated with many styles of bridesmaid dresses. Some are prom-style dresses and some are more traditional dresses with lace, gossamer fabric and rainbow sherbet-colored dresses.

Burt said the dresses were donated by friends. Throughout the play Burt wears a teal tea-length bridesmaid dress.

The main act in "Always a Bridesmaid" is divided into five sub-sections in the form of a 'bridal checklist.'

The subjects Burt deals with include:

- deciding on a formal, informal or traditional wedding,
- establishing a firm budget,
- talking with a photographer about bridal/wedding photos,
- interviewing musicians for ceremony and reception, and
- finding a location that suits your needs for a reception.

describing.

In one scene, she uses Barbie and Ken dolls as models to talk about traditional and non-traditional weddings.

While talking about selection of music for the wedding, she describes the records she used to listen to.

She and her girlfriends would imitate Cher's hair flip while listening to her music.

"I had to use a beach towel because my hair wasn't long enough (to flip)," she said.

Burt said the scenes were real events taken from her experiences.

"The bulk of the show is inspired by real life," she said. "The rest is part of the bigger (wedding) ethos."

Burt said she usually acts in two

SIUC plays a year. Earlier this year she had a part in "Loss: Stories About the End of Things—An Evening of Contemporary Performances."

Burt, a Wisconsin native, got her bachelor's degree in speech communication at the University of Wisconsin-LaCrosse and her master's degree in performance studio at SIUC.

She said she wants to as well as perform theater after she graduates.

The Marion Kleinau Theatre is located on the second floor of the Communications Building. Tickets are $2 and are available from 1 to 4 p.m. at the theatre box office or prior to show time.

'Henry' portrays unlikely serial killer in film inspired by real-life account

By Jeff Pavli
Staff Writer

A psychotic killer was loose in the Student Center Video Lounge Wednesday when Student Programming Council's video committee presented "Henry: Portrait of a Serial Killer."

The film, inspired by real-life serial killer Henry Lee Lucas, is a demonstration of how easily a brutal murderer can walk among an unsuspecting society.

It is graphically violent, but not a slasher movie because the violence is portrayed with total realism. In fact, the story is so dry and boring that the movie seems similar to a documentary. The acting and direction are so real the audience believes what it sees on the screen.

Originally made in 1986, release of the movie was delayed because the producers wanted it rated by Motion Picture Association of America standards, but they were surprised when the group gave it an 'X' rating.

Several years later the movie found its way into several film festivals and was seen by some important critics. By 1989, it was on Roger Ebert's top films of 1989 list.

The genius of the movie is that while it may seem mediocre at first, it haunts the viewer even after it is over. This is crucial because it is later on when the viewer realizes Henry is so normal he could be the person living next door.

Michael Rooker, of "Mississippi Burning" and "Days of Thunder," is the key to the realism. As Henry, he is a frighteningly polite cross between Billy Crystal and Dolph Lundgren.

The movie haunts the viewer — even after it is over.

Even though Henry is uneducated and has a mildly glazed look in his eyes, the audience can't believe he could be a murderer. Sexually abused as a child by his mother, whose murder Henry goes to jail for, it is hard even to blame him when he does kill her.

The movie begins with several scenes of dead bodies, all murdered at different places in different ways. Henry appears, but is only driving his car so the audience doesn't actually see him kill until later.

The other two main characters are introduced when Otis, Henry's unintelligent homosexual friend from prison picks up his equally mindless sister, Becky, at the airport. Becky's husband is abusive, and she is trying to get away from him.

Henry and Otis live together, and when Otis brings Becky home, she and Henry are immediately attracted to each other. As they get closer, Henry finds out Becky also was abused by her parents.

One night while Henry and Otis are out, they pick up two prostitutes. Henry struggles with one and kills her. The other prostitute panics, so he kills her as well.

Otis is very upset, but Henry manages to calm him down enough to realize he enjoyed it. Soon, tutored by Henry, murder becomes Otis' way of dealing with stress.

The body count continues to rise as they get accustomed to their new hobby.

Throughout the movie, Henry kills people with frighteningly little thought. He neither enjoys nor dislikes his actions, he simply must do it as if he is programmed to.

Carbondale churches celebrate Easter with many ways to worship

By Jefferson Robbins
Staff Writer

Local churches will observe Easter with a weekend of ceremonies and feasts, giving Carbondale parishioners a wide choice of ways to worship, ministers said Thursday.

The Wesley Foundation, 816 S. Illinois, will have a Good Friday service at 12 p.m. and regular Sunday service at 11 a.m., followed by an Easter progressive supper with four courses at four different houses, Wesley director Kenneth Wallace said.

Wallace said that Easter is not only a celebration of Christ's rebirth, but also a celebration of spring.

"The timing of Easter as it is celebrated here in the United States is really significant," Wallace said.

"People are sort of coming out of hibernation. Physical things remind you of the newness of life."

Robert Gray, pastor of the Lutheran Student Center at 700 S. University, agreed that life and renewal are the focus of the holiday.

Lutheran Center will have a Tre Ore ("Three Hours") service from 12 to 3 p.m. Friday, observing the three hours Christ suffered on the cross. A Tenebrae ("Darkness") service will begin at 7:30 p.m. to mark the night that fell after Christ's death.

On Sunday, Easter sunrise service will begin at 6:30 a.m., followed by a breakfast at 7:30, Sunday school at 9:30 and worship at 10.

Perhaps the most intricate Good Friday service will be held at the Canterbury Fellowship of the Episcopal Church at 402 W. Mill, said Rector Lewis A. Payne.

Friday's program will begin at 12:10 p.m. with the Stations of the Cross ceremony, a reenactment of events on Christ's walk through Jerusalem to the site of his crucifixion. Regular service will begin at 7 p.m. with a series of Bible readings and prayers, followed by the Service of the Unveiling of the Cross and a mass communion.

On Saturday, Canterbury's Vigil of Easter will start at 8 p.m. with the lighting of the Paschal candle.

The Newman Catholic Student Center's Easter services will begin with a Commemoration of the Lord's Passion at 7 p.m. Friday evening, followed on Saturday with an 8 p.m. Easter Vigil mass and reception.

Dillard proud of first 4 years, looking to gain second term

By Leslie Colp
Staff Writer

Carbondale Mayor Neil Dillard said no formal opposition for the April 2 election is a mixed blessing.

Dillard said the fact that nobody filed to run against him could mean residents are pleased with the way he has done things or it could mean they do not want the responsibilities of mayor.

But the 62-year-old incumbent said he is pleased with many of the accomplishments made in his first four-year term as mayor and is looking forward to another term.

The progress Carbondale has made, including the expansion of the University Mall and downtown development, is something everybody can be proud of, he said. Downtown development includes improving the Town Square, which is bordered by Jackson Street, Monroe Street and Illinois Avenue.

Dillard said bringing more jobs to Carbondale is one of the most important projects he wants to continue. One way to bring additional jobs and money to Carbondale is bringing an off-track betting parlor to the city, he said.

Officials from Fairmount Park race track in Collinsville have not said how many jobs the parlor will bring to the city, but the proposal would net the city $75,000 a year for five years.

Although Dillard said profits from the betting parlor could not be designated for a specific project, the money could improve the chances of having a new civic center and city hall.

Dillard said being mayor is not always a fun job. He estimates he spends about 30 to 40 hours acting as mayor in addition to working full-time for SIUC as a program director for regional research and service.

He said some of the more memorable projects in his first term as mayor include expanding the University Mall and the progress of the East-West couple.

The East-West couple, currently under construction, is expected to alleviate traffic congestion in Carbondale. It will change the two-way section of West Walnut Street into a one-way segment of Illinois 13.

Dillard has lived in Carbondale since 1964 and received a bachelor of science degree in business administration in 1955 and a master of business and administration in 1968, both from SIUC. He and his wife, Mary Ellen, live at 500 S. Oakland.

Promising playwrights to polish one-acts in series of performances

By Annette Holder
Staff Writer

The best student playwrights won't be combining chemicals but will be perfecting chemistry when they premiere their work at the Laboratory Theater.

The performance of four one-act plays will begin running tonight. Tickets are $3. The Lab Theater is located in the Communications Building.

The four plays chosen to be performed were selected from approximately 20 by a committee composed of one undergraduate student, two graduate students and two faculty members.

The plays will be performed by theater students. "Autumn Rain" and "Not To Be" will be performed on March 29 and April 6 at 8 p.m. and on March 31 at 3 p.m. "The Gathering" and "Man and Wife" will be performed on March 30 and April 5 at 8 p.m. and on April 7 at 3 p.m.

"Autumn Rain" is a play about two old women written by Brian Holtz, senior in theater from Iowa. Holtz said he was inspired by some of his interesting relatives.

"I have a bunch of dingy aunts," said Holtz. "They are cynical and joke about life."

Holtz said he got the idea to write the play as a sophomore and it took almost a year to write.

Sarah Ann Bowman, senior in theater from Rantoul, directs "Autumn Rain."

Bowman said the play was her favorite of the four.

"Not To Be," by Denise Kay Dillard, graduate student in the theater, is a comedy that relates the experiences of Shakespeare on his 47th birthday.

The play, which runs brings Shakespeare down to an average person's level, said Kelly Grounds, senior in theater from Indiana who directs the play.

"(In Shakespeare's plays), there are heroes who are above everyone else," said Grounds.

Shakespeare, on the other hand, is pursued by lawyers, nagged by his daughter and has writer's block.

Grounds said her role as director is to make sure the mood of the play is consistent. This means she must oversee the actors, script, set and lighting.

Grounds said she enjoyed seeing the actors develop their own comedic actions during rehearsal.

She said each performance will vary because the actors are encouraged to innovate.

"Man and Wife" by John Reeves, graduate student in theater, is a play about infidelity and manipulation.

Reeves said it took only three days to write the play. He was inspired to write it after reading the Chinese novel, "Golden Lotus."

"The Gathering," by Evan Coram, graduate student in theater, is a play of a woman messiah who touches the lives of the homeless in the United States.

Coram said he was inspired to write the play after seeing a full page advertisement in the New York Times asking what readers would do if that page and the sidewalk were their home.

Plastics industry launches major recycling campaign

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The plastics industry launched a major campaign Thursday to get "the majority of American consumers" involved in recycling programs that would handle 25 percent of all plastic bottles and containers by 1995.

The industry's "blueprint for plastics recycling" focuses heavily on helping cities and counties set up garbage separation and collection systems that would enable more Americans to participate in recycling.

It also commits plastic producers to building more facilities for reprocessing trash items, and calls for consumer goods companies to use more recycled plastic in products ranging from soda bottles to detergent containers to margarine tubs.

The goal, industry officials said, is to create by 1995 the infrastructure needed to recycle 18 billion plastic bottles and containers — roughly 25 percent of the total.

"We're embarking on a national effort to make plastics recycling an everyday activity for the majority of American consumers by 1995," said Edgar Woolard, chairman of Du Pont Co., one of the nation's largest plastic producers.

Joining Woolard at a news conference was John Pepper, president of Procter & Gamble Co., who said his company expected to use 40 million pounds of recycled plastic per year.

Pepper said his company and many others were changing their purchasing practices to increase market demand for recycled plastic — a key problem blocking the expansion of recycling.

For example, he said Procter & Gamble used to buy only newly made — or "virgin" — plastic for its product packaging. Now, he said company guidelines call for buying recycled plastic whenever possible.

Pepper said his company's efforts were being held back by the availability of recycled plastic.

"If we could get all the recycled plastic we're technologically capable of using, we could use more than 75 million pounds a year," Pepper said.

However, Woolard and Pepper said the key to the program's success is encouraging more local governments to incorporate recycling in their garbage handling programs.

Toward that end, a plastics industry task force — the Council for Solid Waste Solutions — has prepared a detailed guidebook.

Teen-agers sporting price tags

MIAMI (UPI) — Adults may think it's tacky but south Florida teen-agers think it's "really wild" to leave the price tags and manufacturers' throw-away tags on their sneakers, hats and clothes.

"In the old days people would take off the tags," said Albert Hall, a Miami Beach High School senior who sports a $10.95 tag on his Los Angeles Raiders cap.

"We just leave the tags on," he said. "It's noticeable. People see it more. It looks lively when you walk. It's flying around all over the place. It attracts people."

Dawn Lee, a junior at Boyd H. Anderson High School in Lauderdale Lakes, said her new Cherokee sneakers and accompanying plastic logo stopped her friends in their tracks.

"When I came to school, everybody said, 'Where'd you get those? They're the freshest sneakers,'" said Lee, 16. "It's really wild."

Dodgers release Valenzuela

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Fernando Valenzuela, a cult hero at Dodger Stadium since his Rookie of the Year and Cy Young Award season in 1981, Thursday was released by the Los Angeles Dodgers.

By releasing Valenzuela before Monday night, the Dodgers were only responsible for 45 days of his $2.55 million salary.

Valenzuela yielded eight runs in 3 1-2 innings of an exhibition game Wednesday in Vero Beach, Fla.

The 31-year-old left-hander from Mexico, who was 13-13 last year, has not been the same pitcher since he suffered a shoulder injury in 1988. Although he recorded a no-hitter against St. Louis in June, the Dodgers were not sold on Valenzuela's effectiveness and his spring ERA of 7.88 finalized the front-office decision.

"This was an extremely difficult decision to make because Fernando has established himself as one of the all-time great Dodgers," General Manager Fred Claire said in a statement. "He has pitched with great heart and tremendous ability, but we had to make a decision based on the needs of our pitching staff. We wish Fernando and his family the very best and we will always be grateful for his many contributions."

Dodger Manager Tom Lasorda waxed nostalgic after the midday announcement in Vero Beach.

"I will never forget Fernando and all he has done for me and the Los Angeles Dodgers," Lasorda said. "It was a privilege and honor to manage him over the years because he was without a doubt a great talent and great competitor. I want to thank him for all the memories."

Team owner Peter O'Malley, who in recent years lobbied for Valenzuela's place on the roster, said the pitcher transcended the game.

"Fernando has been a very valuable and integral part of Dodger history," he said. "We are very proud of this man, his accomplishments and what he has meant to the Dodgers, the city of Los Angeles and baseball throughout the world."

Valenzuela did not expect the unconditional release.

"These games don't mean nothing," he said after Wednesday's poor outing. "They're just for work, getting ready for the season. I'm with the team, that's the main thing."

Valenzuela was the most dominant pitcher in the National League a decade ago when he seemingly came out of nowhere to spin a nearly unhittable screwball and become the first person to win the Rookie of the Year and Cy Young Award winner in the same season.

Subbing for Jerry Reuss in the season opener, Valenzuela held Houston to five hits in a 2-0 victory. He went on to record a 13-7 mark and 2.48 ERA and started for the NL in the All-Star Game.

An emerging legend among the large Mexican population in Los Angeles, Valenzuela won 19 games in 1982 and 21 games in 1986. Valenzuela was 0-3 in July 1988 when he was placed on the disabled list for the first time in his career because of a stretched anterior capsule in his left shoulder.

Barkley suspended, fined for spitting on eight-year-old

NEW YORK (UPI) — Philadelphia 76ers forward Charles Barkley was suspended without pay for one game and fined $10,000 for a spitting incident earlier this week, the NBA announced Thursday.

Barkley, the 76ers' leading scorer and rebounder, spit at a heckler Tuesday night during the fourth quarter of a 98-95 overtime loss to the New Jersey Nets but missed his target and hit an 8-year-old girl sitting in a courtside seat.

Rod Thorn, the NBA vice president for operations, investigated the incident and imposed the penalty on Barkley, who was to sit out Thursday night's game in Charlotte against the Hornets.

Barkley said Wednesday he regrets his actions.

"He was walking toward me and I spit at him," he said. "I was tired, and I didn't have enough foam in my mouth. It went everywhere. I made a mistake."

"You do stupid things and stuff like that happens. I just have to live with a stupid mistake."

After the incident, an usher filed a report with management of the Meadowlands Arena, where the game was played, and it was sent to the NBA office. The league later obtained a videotape of the incident, which clearly shows Barkley spitting into the crowd.

Barkley has gotten into trouble in the past for his tempestuous behavior on and off the court.

Last season, he was ejected from a game for a spitting incident and last November, the NBA talked to Barkley about his profane outbursts toward fans.

Barkley was also the object of a demonstration earlier this season when he made an ill-considered joke about beating his wife.

During a practice earlier this month, Barkley got into a fight with backup center Manute Bol and he was recently fined $5,000 by the 76ers for a dispute with Coach Jim Lynam.

Philadelphia has 50-50 chance to trade for Chicago's Williams

CLEARWATER, Fla. (UPI) — Philadelphia Phillies president Bruce Giles said Thursday the team has a "50-50" chance of acquiring Mitch Williams from the Chicago Cubs, although talks have stalled between the two clubs.

Phillies general manager Lee Thomas said he has not talked to Cubs scout Hugh Alexander for three days. Thomas also denied reports that the holdup is because Chicago won't take pitcher Bruce Ruffin in the deal, saying that is "incorrect."

The Cubs are believed to be seeking right-handed pitcher Bob Scanlan, who was 8-11 with a 4.85 ERA for Triple-A Scranton/Wilkes-Barre last season, and left-handed reliever Chuck McElroy, who was 6-8 with a 2.72 ERA.

Williams saved 36 games when the Cubs won the National League East in 1989 but was 1-8 with 16 saves last season, bothered by a knee injury.

Chicago signed free agent closer Dave Smith from Houston in the off season, and at that time Williams blasted the move, usurping him as the No. 1 closer and demanded a trade.

"If they do it (trade), I hope they do it soon," Williams said this week in Mesa, Ariz. "I'll pitch somewhere this year, I don't care where. Baseball is baseball."

"But they're not telling me anything," he said. "I just want to know what I'm supposed to do."

Williams, who was scheduled to pitch Thursday in Yuma, Ariz., against San Diego, met with Cubs General Manager Jim Frey this week but didn't get any answers.

Chicago Manager Don Zimmer said he wants to use both Williams and Smith in relief, similar to Cincinnati's three-man combination of Rob Dibble, Randy Myers and Norm Charlton.

"I said, 'What's so wrong with you and Dave Smith doing what they (Reds) did?'" Zimmer said. "He (Williams) agreed, or at least he said he did."

Sauer's resignation a surprise to Cardinals

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The man who apparently was in line to someday become president of the St. Louis Cardinals resigned unexpectedly, but will stay on as a consultant to the team's owner, Anheuser-Busch Cos. Inc.

Mark Sauer resigned Wednesday from his post as president of Civic Center Corp., which operates Busch Stadium, the downtown home of the Cardinals. Civic Center is a subsidiary of Anheuser-Busch, which also is the parent company of the Cardinals and Anheuser-Busch Co., the world's largest brewer.

Sauer's resignation was announced late Wednesday. He could not be reached for comment. The president of the team and Sauer's boss, Fred Kuhlmann, declined to comment on the reasons for Sauer's departure.

Kuhlmann also said the nature of Sauer's duties as a consultant had not yet been determined.

Sauer, 44, reportedly resigned after resisting pressure to take over Busch Entertainment Corp., the company's entertainment subsidiary, which operates theme parks around the country. He previously had been vice president of Busch Entertainment before joining Civic Center.

Sauer was appointed president of Civic Center in 1984, then joined the Cardinals in 1989 as executive vice president and chief operating officer. He had been seen as the logical choice to eventually succeed Kuhlmann, 74.

Sauer and Kuhlmann had worked together with the general manager of the Cardinals, Dal Maxvill, in making many of the important decisions about player signings and deals.

Maxvill said from the team's spring training camp in St. Petersburg, Fla., that he learned of Sauer's resignation when his office was notified by fax.

Hull and Oates rock St. Louis

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — After one dazzling season for the St. Louis Blues, Brett Hull and Adam Oates will have to pay more dues to be considered a tandem in the class of Wayne Gretzky-Jari Kurri and Mike Bossy-Bryan Trottier.

But Hull and Oates—not to be confused with pop music duo Hall and Oates—have St. Louis a happy hockey town as the playoffs approach and baseball's Cardinals open a season of low expectations.

Oates is the setup man and Hull scores the goals and despite all the contact, they spend time together away from the ice too.

On a rare day off this past Tuesday, the duo flew in that morning from Minnesota and decided to play golf. It was only their second time out this spring but the two played well and had a good time.

By the end of the round, Hull was booming shots off the tee and from the fairway while Oates played steadily—much like their styles on the ice.

With three games left in the season, Hull had scored 83 goals. The record held by Wayne Gretzky for a single season is 92. Oates had 85 assists despite missing 18 games earlier this season with a groin injury. Gretzky had 121 assists.

Oates avoids any comparison between him and Gretzky; Hull says only Gretzky has anything on his linemate as a passer.

"I don't any guy ever thinks of that," Oates said. "I mean, he's been doing it for 10 years. I've done it for one month."

Oates has a vanity license plate on his car that reads PASS-IT.

"Adam is second to only one and we all know who that is," Hull said. "What's between us is awesome, like a quarterback and a receiver, like Joe Montana and Jerry Rice. He knows how to snap it away to you, when to lay it in soft, when to put it ahead of you, when to wait till your back is turned."

Oates has assisted on 40 of Hull's 83 goals despite missing nearly a quarter of the season.

"When you play with guys long enough, there's a communication," Oates said. "I know where Hulle's going to be. I don't have to look. People say, 'You pass blind.' But it looks better than it really is. We've just played together for the past 50 games."

"I don't think Wayne Gretzky had to look for Jari Kurri all those times for a thousand goals."

Oates praised Hull's passing ability as well as his scoring talent.

"Hulle's a great passer," Oates said. "People don't know that because his shot is so great. But he makes the right decision when he passes the puck."

The duo has led the Blues to their second-best record in franchise history. Ticket sales are high for the upcoming first round of the playoffs.

"We're not a one-man or two-man team," Hull said. "I can't do it by myself."

On a green late in the round, Hull asked Oates which way it would break. Oates said left and Hull stepped up and promptly sank a beautiful 15-foot putt.

Again, Hull scores.

Civil rights group may boycott bid for bowl

HOUSTON (UPI) — Civil rights advocates may ask the NFL to eliminate Houston as a potential site for the 1995 Super Bowl unless the state establishes a full-civil holiday in honor of slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr.

The Martin Luther King March Committee, based in San Antonio, is withholding a decision about a boycott of Texas as a future site for the Super Bowl, pending a bill proposed by state Sen. Frank Tejeda, D-San Antonio.

Houston, Miami, New Orleans and Tampa, Fla., have been named as top contenders for the 1995 Super Bowl. The NFL recently stripped Phoenix of the 1993 game because of a controversy surrounding Arizona voters' rejection of a paid state holiday honoring King.

King's birthday has been combined with Confederate

Heroes Day. State offices remain open with a skeleton crew, and people who take the day off must give up another state holiday, such as Texas Independence Day or San Jacinto Day.

"I feel very strongly about having a Martin Luther King Jr. holiday," Tejeda said. "I wouldn't work so hard for it otherwise."

"I feel that a boycott is a legitimate tool, to achieve one's goals. Hopefully, everyone will vote based on the merit of the bill and the merits, ideas and ideals that Dr. King stood for, and it won't come down to the boycott or threat of a boycott."

Houston Oilers owner Bud Adams met Wednesday with Mayor Kathy Whitmire and Harris County Judge Jon Lindsay at the office of Mark Henry, president of the Houston Visitors and Convention Bureau.

Coach, players fined for brawl

MONTREAL (UPI) — Los Angeles Kings Coach Tom Webster and three Calgary Flames players were suspended and fined Thursday by the NHL for brawling in a game five days earlier.

Webster was suspended for four regular-season and/or playoff games and was fined $5,000 for an incident involving Flames center Doug Gilmour during a game last Saturday.

"The type of behavior demonstrated by both clubs cannot be tolerated," NHL executive vice-president Brian O'Neill said in a statement.

"In reviewing the incident it should be pointed out that a coach has special responsibilities and must set an example for his players. It is also clear that the aforementioned Flames' players acted in a highly irresponsible manner," O'Neill said.

It appeared Webster, who was at the Kings bench, punched Gilmour who was milling in front of it with players from both teams. Webster later said he merely pushed his hand in Gilmour's face.

NHL executive vice president Brian O'Neill said that under league by-laws, Webster can conduct practices but "may not exercise any function during the games".

The Kings have not yet said if they will appeal the suspension to Webster, a leading candidate for Coach of the Year. If they decided not to appeal, Webster would miss the last two regular-season games and the first two playoff games.

The Smythe Division-leading Kings headed into Thursday's game against Minnesota two points behind Chicago in the league's overall standings.

Gilmour was suspended for the next two regular season and/or playoff games and was fined $500. Flames right winger Tim Hunter received a two game suspension while center Joel Otto was fined $500.

appearances, including a seven-inning stint against Northeastern Illinois last weekend in a 15-inning marathon.

Junior Sean Bergman, who will start today's ballgame, posts a 2-0 mark and 4.81 ERA.

Junior Ryan McWilliams posts a 2-0 record and 3.27 ERA. Rigglesman plans to throw him against Southwest on Saturday.

Meyer is 2-1 for SIUC and is expected to throw in Sunday's contest.

Senior Tom Strabavy is expected to be the other starter for SIUC on Saturday.

Strabavy has a 0-1 record and 5.00 ERA. Strabavy worked eight innings against Northeastern, allowing 3 runs on seven hits. He struck out seven Golden Eagle batters, but didn't figure in the decision.

Following the four games against Southwest, the Salukis go on the road for games at Evansville, St. Louis and Bradley.

Bowman, Armstrong elected to Hall of Fame

MONTREAL (UPI) — William Scott "Scotty" Bowman, the winningest coach in NHL history, and iron man linesman Neil Armstrong have been elected to the Hockey Hall of Fame.

Bowman was elected in the builders' category and Armstrong in the officials' category, it was announced Wednesday.

Bowman, the NHL's Coach of the Year in 1977 while with the Montreal Canadiens, had a win percentage of .661, winning 739 of 1,276 games he coached.

Bowman's Montreal teams won five Stanley Cup championships, including four in a row from 1975-76 through 1978-79.

"The success of Scotty Bowman both at the coaching and administrative level speaks for itself," said Brian O'Neill, chairman of the Board of Directors of the Toronto-based Hockey Hall of Fame and Museum.

"The game of hockey has benefited greatly from the hard work, insight and innovative approaches Scotty has brought in his nearly 40 years in coaching and management," O'Neill said.

Bowman, now the Pittsburgh Penguins director of player development, coached the St. Louis Blues from 1967-71, Montreal from 1971-79 and the Buffalo Sabres from 1979-87.

He led the expansion St. Louis team to three consecutive Stanley Cup final appearances from 1967-68 through 1969-70. He also served as the team's general manager in 1969-70 and 1970-71.

Bowman joined Buffalo in 1979-80 and served as director of hockey operations, general manager and shared coaching responsibilities until 1987. He worked as a television hockey analyst until joining Pittsburgh last June.

Armstrong, a veteran of 21 NHL seasons, retired after the 1977-78 season after a record 1,744 regular season games. Of 208 playoff appearances, 48 were in the Stanley Cup finals. He also worked 10 All-Star games.
